

Have you ever left a protest feeling despaired? Did you get accomplished nothing? Did it feel like it was just a photo op for some giant non-profit to use for PR? Did those jerks in the yellow vests herding protesters come off like wannabe cops? It may just a parade! Here are more ways to know there are alternative examples of historical protests than taking the pressure off demonstrators.

I Hate a Parade!

Historical alternatives to performative protests

*Legal disclaimer: This is for historic informational purposes only. This is not intended to advocate for illegal badoozery, or inferred illegal super cool activities.

Institute for Applied Autonomy
Little Brother

"Our shit works." Since 1998.
www.appliedautonomy.com/lb.html

In Italy, these all white clad activists would be donning DIY armor under those white overalls. Their armor could be tires, life preservers, or anything that could take a blow. They were at the front of any protest, ready to take a literal beating. At the 2000 WTO protests, Disobedient Squards "who would smash windows to get the police to back off instead. This hit and run tactic was used to keep the police in disarray, of the other groups and chase them away from lines with tires, police, patrols, infiltrables, and anything they had to soften the blows from the police.

The LA hactivists who used their creativity and scientific knowledge to build gadgets and setup surveillance means of subverting the surveillance state. Some of their inventions included the Twitter invader, "crime-bois" that could of surveillance cameras in NYC, and predecessor TXTMob, i-See - a map of various "crime-bois" that could graffiti roads and disperse propaganda.

In Italy, these all white clad activists would be donning DIY armor under those white overalls. Their armor could be tires, life preservers, or anything that could take a blow. They were at the front of any protest, ready to take a literal beating. At the 2000 WTO protests, Disobedient Squads "who would smash windows to get the police to back off instead. This hit and run tactic was used to keep the police in disarray, of the other groups and chase them away from lines with tires, police, patrols, infiltrables, and anything they had to soften the blows from the police.

Activism has been more than just parades throughout history! In the fight against fascism and capitalism, we need creativity as much as anything else. Here are some great resources for organization.

Documentaries you should watch:
Showdown in Seattle, Deep Dish TV, 1999

Revolting in Prague- IMF protests, Undercuts, 2000

Free zines for download!!!
sproutdistro.com/catalog/zines/direct-action/
crimethinc.com/zines/how-to-form-an-affinity-group

Up until recently, activists would congregate at a welcome center prior to a demonstration. There, they would give training to newbies, provide food and lodging, and have a place to rest up in after a demo. As rents have skyrocketed and activist spaces have dwindled, welcome centers are slowly becoming a thing of the past. They still serve a vital role in organizing and training. If all of the above makes you feel a little sheepish, consider hosting a welcome center for an action.

Biotic Baking Brigade

Ever seen the pie-in-the-face gag? Well, these brave souls literally would pie businessmen and politicians. The symbolic act of inflicting humiliation left their targets seething in the media, and there is nothing funnier than watching someone try to convince the public that getting pied is the equivalent of an assassination attempt.